~ DID YOU KNOW ~

“There was more beer than water loaded onto the Mayflower before the Puritans set off for the New World”

In the early 17th century, the English considered beer safer to drink than water. It was with good reason, too—European water was typically taken from the same sources used to dispose of sewage and garbage and was therefore usually polluted. Alcohol was also considered an effective analgesic (a pilgrim’s version of Advil) and provided energy as well as enhanced the quality of life.

WINE of THE MONTH

BAVA “Libera” Barbera D’Asti

Barbera d’Asti is one of the most famous wines from the Piedmont region of north-western Italy where Barolo is king.

This beautifully produced barbera is an intense ruby red in color. A fragrant nose with scents of wild prune, black cherry jam, pepper. It’s dry but develops in the mouth with sweet notes of red fruits; balanced alcohol content and stunningly soft thanks to its reduced acidity.
